

Don't Just Stand There. Make Something!

Made in FLORIDA

If you get satisfaction from making something, get excited about using new technology or if you just like to know how things work, a manufacturing career may be perfect for you.

Manufacturing is the process of changing raw or processed materials into products people can use. It's a career that uses your imagination and skills with the hottest technologies to make better things for our world.

Because manufacturing is so diverse, there are unlimited opportunities for people of all personalities and education levels to build a challenging and rewarding career. With more than 17,000 manufacturers right here in Florida, you're sure to find a company that suits you. Like Harris Corporation in Melbourne, where they make digital microwave radios, broadband wireless access products and secure communications systems. Or Atlantic Marine in Jacksonville where you could build and repair cruise ships, megayachts or U.S. Navy ships.

Plus, with an average annual wage of $47,500, manufacturing jobs pay up to 20% more than the average annual wage in Florida.

Start planning today to get the skills you'll need in today's modern manufacturing environment. Look for classes and training programs that offer industry certifications — like the Manufacturing Skills Standards Council's CPT certification. This MSSC CPT certification can open doors to great careers and earn you college credit towards the Engineering Technology A.S. degree.
